EUROPEAN INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, AUGUST 2.

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Downing-street, July 30.

The letter, of which the following is an extract, was received from Col. Graham, by the right hon. Lord Grenville, his majesty's principal secretary of state for foreign affairs, dated Roveredo, July 4, 1796.

On the 30th ult. I had the honour of informing your Lordship, that the enemy made an unsuccessful attack on Monte Baldo on the 28th, since that all has remained quiet. Marshall Wurmser arrived here this morning.

Downing-street, July 30.

The letter, of which the following is an extract, received from Lieut. Col. Crauford, by the right hon. Lord Grenville, his majesty's principal secretary of state for foreign affairs dated head quarters of his royal highness the Arch-Duke of Austria, Elzingen, near Pfortzheim, July 11, 1796.

I have the honour to inform your Lordship, that on the 7th and 8th inst. the Arch-Duke remained in possession of Ettlingen, in order to give time for the arrival at Pfortzheim of the Saxons, who were advancing from Graben to re-inforce his royal highness's army—and the corps that had been detached into the mountains, under the command of gen. Keim, to cover the left, was ordered to take its principal position at Frewen Alb.

The Saxons reached Pfortzheim in the night of the 7th. On the 8th, the dispositions were made to attack general Moreau on the 10th in the position of the Murg, at Raftadt, Kuppenheim and Gertzback, and, on the 9th, while the preparatory movements were executing, in order to bring the troops forward to the different points from whence they were to advance the next morning, the enemy forced back the Arch-Duke's advanced posts with a part of their army, while their principal force attacked general Keim. His royal highness immediately supported his advanced posts, and was victorious on his right, and along his whole front—but general Keim, after having made a most obstinate resistance, was obliged to yield to the superiority of numbers, & he retired to Pfortzheim. The Saxons, who were in march to cover that general's left flank, did the same—and as this unfortunate circumstance gave the enemy possession of all the passes in the Mountains, on the Arch-Duke's left, his royal highness found himself under the necessity of marching with his main army to Pfortzheim on the 10th, where he is now encamped.

The Austrians lost on this occasion about 1600 men and four pieces of cannon. The loss of the French cannot be exactly ascertained—but it must have been very considerable.

The prince of Conde's corps, which has behaved with great bravery, was at Villengen on the 8th, the date of the last accounts that were received from it. The Austrian general Frolich still remained in the Brigaw.

The enemy has passed the Lahn, and the army, which was left for the defence of that part of the country, has retired to the position of Bergen, having thrown proper garrisons into Mayence and Ehrenbreitstein.

At the Court of the Queen's House, the 29th of July, 1796—present, the King's most excellent majesty in council.

His majesty in council was this day pleased to order, that the parliament, which stands prorogued to Thursday the 16th day of August next, should be farther prorogued to Thursday the 15th day of September following—And the convocations of Canterbury and York, which stand prorogued to Wednesday the 17th of August next, should be farther prorogued to Friday the 16th of September following.

BY THE KING.

A PROCLAMATION.

George R.

Whereas our parliament stands prorogued to Thursday the 15th day of September next, we, with the advice of our privy council, do hereby publish and declare our royal will and pleasure, that the said Parliament shall, on the said 15th day of September next, be held, and sit for the dispatch of divers weighty and important affairs. And the lords spiritual and temporal, and the knights, citizens and burgesses, and the commissioners for shires and burghs of the house of commons, are hereby required to give their attendance accordingly at Westminster, on the said 15th day of September next.

Given at our court at the Queen's House, the 29th day of July, 1796, in the 36th year of our reign.

AUGUST 4.

The silver Saints find just the same respect with the infidels as they had from their official defenders. They have in each instance been taken according to the necessity of the case.

—“Like old Plate,
Not for the Fashion but the Weight.”

The master of a neutral vessel, arrived at Leith, mentions, that two of the vessels which were engaged with the Glutton, are arrived at Flushing; one of them had one half of her crew killed, and her gun deck entirely tore up; the other was very much shattered.

Yesterday at noon a council was held at the Secretary of State's office, Downing-street, at which most of the cabinet ministers were present.

At the breaking up of the council, Mr. Hammond, one of the under Secretaries of State, received his dispatches and in the afternoon he left town, on his departure for the continent, accompanied by Mr. Taylor, one of the gentlemen of the foreign office. Two of his majesty's messengers attended him.

Our trade with Portugal is one of the most valuable which we carry on with any of the European powers. By the celebrated treaty of 1703, or as some call it the Methuen treaty, on account of its having been framed by Mr. Methuen, Portugal engages to take our woollens, and we engage to admit her wines at stipulated duties. Perhaps the woollens which she takes from us are not to a greater amount than the wines which we receive from her; but Portugal, having little internal commerce of her own, purchases a very considerable quantity of British manufacture which she pays us for in gold. The greater part of our gold is imported from Portugal. Mr. Baretti says, he was informed, that the weekly packet from Lisbon, brings on an average fifty thousand pounds to our merchants. But this information, Mr. Adam Smith, with reason considers as exaggerated. It is certain, however, that our importation of gold from Portugal is very great.

Many of the allies seemed to carry on the war on true arithmetical principles; they thought that victory would be with the power that had the longest purse; and that the financial resources of France would soon be exhausted. They calculated the force and feebleness of the revolution by the rise or fall of the assignats, and when it began to lose one hundred per cent. then it was boldly asserted the Revolution could not longer support such a depreciation, and that the Republic would be annihilated—vain assertion! Whether the price of the Louis was at 1000 or 6000, the armies of France continued to conquer; and while our shallow politicians were arguing in the senate on the impossibility of the French making any more vigorous exertions their troops added the Netherlands to the Republic, and waved their banners beyond the Rhine. The same arguments are used now, with respect to the mandates, that were advanced relative to the assignats. It may appear to some to be extraordinary, but we have every reason to suppose that the armies of France are of very little expense to the Republic. Italy pays the expense to the war against the Emperor and the Empire; and the vast contributions that have been levied on the Italian States, and the sums that have been paid for armistices and treaties of peace, have furnished the French government with immense resources in specie—The operations of the armies therefore will be very little affected by the rise or fall of the mandates.

How far the military character of the country may be risen during the present war we shall not pretend to determine; but at least we have lately gained an accession in point of military dignity, and if we cannot boast of the harvest of our laurels, we may shew the increase of our titles. The death of Sir George Howard, has produced no less than seven Field Marshals.

The power of conferring honors, which is attached to the crown, has been termed by an eloquent writer “the cheap defence of nations.” The French Republic, however, without any such expedient has shewn that it has been able to create both soldiers and generals; and however speculative writers may have attempted to dispute the wisdom of their principles, we believe that in the present moment the greater part of Europe will bear witness to the efficacy of their practice.

BATAVIAN REPUBLIC.

HAGUE, JULY 19.

It is well known to have been resolved, that our grand fleet should not have failed from the Texel, till the divisions from Helvoetsluys and Flushing should have joined it. The latter, therefore, consisting of a frigate of 44 guns, and four other smaller ships of war, failed on the 14th instant from the Scheldt. On the 16th, this division fell in with a large English man of war, which immediately gave chase. The four smaller armed vessels immediately failed back to the Scheldt. The frigate was obliged to sustain a warm action, but she fortunately got from her superior enemy, and reached the harbour of Helvoetsluys, though very much damaged. General Bournonville has now forbidden the guard of Burghers of Utrecht all military service, and went afterwards to the heath of Gorfel, between Devender and Zutphen, where his headquarters now are. General Daendels, who has been recalled with his corps from Cleves, has his headquarters at Nimeguen.

Many of the officers and patriots in 1781 have demanded pensions of the Convention.—But their request has been decisively opposed, because the pensions which the officers not upon service now enjoy, already exceeded 300,000 florins. It was even urged, that by adopting such a measure, experience had shewn, that it would be maintaining more secret enemies of the state, and even such men as had joined the Orange party at Dollenburg.

Our provinces still continue to object to pay their contingents in money. Dutch Brabant declared the day before yesterday, to the Convention, that the sum of 100,000 florins, which it is to contribute as its share to the 100 millions of florins, which are to be paid to France, were ready at Bois le Duc; but that it was doubtful whether it should be able to discharge in the same manner its future instalments.

Letters from Bonn state, that the siege of Ehrenbreitstein will speedily begin in form.

The old Almanack has been forbidden under a heavy fine and imprisonment at Brussels.

Yesterday the Convention received the intelligence that the French had entered Frankfort. On a general committee, excluding all strangers, the measures were also pointed out which the French had taken to pursue the Austrians over the Mein from one side, and over the Neckar from the other, in order to cut them off by armies of Jourdan and Moreau, or force them to make their retreat.

JULY 23.

M. Noel, the French minister at our republic, has informed the Convention of the Cape of Good Hope having been recaptured by the French; but the truth of this welcome piece of information is much doubted by those who do not know of any French squadron having failed for that important colony, and therefore are apt to imagine, that by the channels through which this intelligence comes to us, Cape Francois, where two French squadrons have lately arrived from Europe, has been metamorphosed into the Cape of Good Hope.

A similar mistake at least took place with respect to the division which failed last Saturday from Flushing to join the Texel fleet. This fleet had an engagement with a large English man of war, and was even by the Convention announced to consist of Dutch ships, but in fact it was entirely composed of French vessels lately arrived at Flushing from Dunkirk. The Incomparable, a frigate mounting 36 guns, received such considerable damage in this engagement, as to be obliged to put into Helvoetsluys to refit. The other seven ships of different forces returned to Flushing.

GLEANINGS

FROM LATE LONDON PAPERS.

The Empress of RUSSIA, who delights in all things, natural as well as political, has issued a formal edict to encourage a general union between the RUSSIAN men and female POLES, thinking by this matrimonial cross, to eradicate by degrees that aversion which the Poles still retain for their enslavers.

One of our Gambling Ladies, complaining the other day of the loss of her teeth, a little child in the room very innocently asked her, at what Game she was so unfortunate?

St. Cloud, the magnificent palace of the unfortunate Queen of France, and all its parks and royal domain, is to be sold on a National Convention title for the trifling sum of 5000l. sterling! The palace alone cost 200,000l. in building, and the parks and other demesne lands amount at least to 4000 acres.

The PRINCESS OF WALES has clearly ascertained one fact since her marriage, namely, that the older she grows, the more the attachment of her husband towards her will be strengthened.

We hear a certain YOUNG GENTLEMAN, (i. e. the PRINCE OF WALES) means, upon the next vacancy, to offer himself a candidate for the Presidency of the Antiquarian Society, from his extreme partiality to antique pieces.

There is no truth in the report, that the Empress of RUSSIA has offered her fair hand to the King of SWEDEN.

A Bath paper mentions, that the horses of the carriage of Mrs. Moon, in which was her beautiful daughter, ran away and overset the Chariot; at the Sign of the SUN; Miss Moon was taken out, much hurt, at the SUN, from whence she was conveyed to her mother's lodgings, opposite the Seven Stars, and is now in a fair way of recovery, in consequence of the skill and attention of Surgeon Rainbow!
